

Nancy Truitt, FNP

I was born in Reidsville, N.C. but lived most of my life in Tarboro, N.C. My mother grew up in Pilot Mountain and I felt I had “come home” when I moved to these foothills in January 2007. After graduating from East Carolina University with a BS in Nursing, I worked in labor and delivery and then moved to Raleigh and worked at Wake in the Intensive Care Unit. Returning to school at UNC Chapel Hill, I completed my nurse practitioner education in 1973. Prior to moving to this area, I worked for 33 years in a rural health clinic in eastern North Carolina. I have been nationally accredited (board certified) since finishing school.

My interest include gardening and growing flowers, quilting and crocheting and enjoying the great outdoors. I also enjoying traveling. I live near the Mitchell River in Surry County and continue to be startled by the beauty of the countryside I awake to each day.

My goal for my work is to provide personal and complete care to our patients. I have a particular interest in diabetes education but also in providing education in the best way to care for ourselves in all aspects. Wellness and preventive medicine as well as illness care are an important part of my practice.
